My Daily Routine

Read the story.

On weekdays, I normally wake up at 7 o'clock in the morning. It takes me about twenty minutes to get dressed and brush my teeth. I have my breakfast with my family at about half past seven before heading to school, which starts at a quarter past eight.

My first lesson starts at ten to nine. I have two lessons before recess. Recess lasts for fifteen minutes. Then it's back to the classroom until lunch time. I eat lunch at twelve thirty in my classroom but I go to the playground to play with my friends when the bell rings at ten past one. At half past one, lessons start again until ten past three.

In the afternoon, I have a piano lesson or a tennis lesson from four o'clock for one hour. After that, I return home and start my homework at about half past five.

I eat dinner at around six thirty and, at a quarter to seven, I normally watch my favourite programme. It lasts for half an hour. After that, I generally finish my homework and finally, at about eight o'clock, I play a board-game with my dad. At half eight, I start getting ready for bed.

I must be in bed before nine o'clock, but I am allowed to read my book until half past nine. Then it's lights out!

At the Park

Read Daniel's story.

I like to go to the park. In the park, I can ride on my bicycle. I love to listen to the birds singing in the trees.

I can see beautiful flowers in the park. But, I must not pick the flowers. I never throw rubbish on the grass. I always put my rubbish in the bin.

Sometimes, my mum, my dad and my brother come to the park with me. Mum likes to ride her bicycle. My dad likes to sit down on a bench and read his newspaper. My brother enjoys playing football with me on the grass.

Even when the weather is cold, I still enjoy going for a walk in the park. I love to feel the cold air on my cheeks. I always bring some bread for the birds and the swans when the weather is cold.

The Vikings

Read the story.

The Vikings were people who came from Norway and Sweden. They were wonderful sailors and they travelled to far off lands in long and narrow ships called 'longships' or 'dragonships'. The ships had giant wooden carvings of dragons to frighten people. Each longship could carry over one hundred people.

The Vikings also built slower ships for carrying people and goods. These ships were called 'knorrs'. A ship carried drinking water, dried meat, tools, weapons and furs.

They often attacked small towns or villages near the sea. They were warriors, which means they were fighters. They would set fire to many homes and frighten or even kill the people who lived there.

Vikings wore bear skin or wolf skin when they were going into battle. They used wooden shields to protect themselves.

Most Vikings had red or blonde hair. Viking women were very important. Most men were away for long periods of time, so women were in charge of running their farms and their homes. They were also very skilled at protecting themselves from attack.
