The text:

[1] My name is Peter Smith. I am a builder. I left school at the age of 15 because it was boring. I didn't like my teachers because they lived a different world and because I felt that they couldn't understand us. However, today I feel sorry about my ideas. I am sure that I shouldn't do so. I had to work hard and listen to my teachers' advice

[2] Thirty five years ago, George and I were classmates in the primary school. We were friends because we liked each other and shared the same experiences. Besides we were only 5 years old.

[3] Today, I met George in the milk market after more than thirty years. The thing that surprises me now is my reaction to meeting him so long. From day to day, I often see men who went to school with me and who did well for themselves. They are now doctors, teachers, engineers, and one of them is a minister. Sometimes, they see me, too but they neglect me as I am a failure, whenever I meet one of these people, I always feel embarrassed. With Doctor George it was different, because I felt happy when I saw him.

[4] Today, he saw me before I saw him. He called me from the other side of the street and when I heard my name, I turned to see him smiling. He was healthy and well- dressed. I can't say how pleased I was when he shook my hand and asked how I was, but I couldn't answer. My old clothes spoke for themselves. After exchanging some words and because George was in a hurry we agreed to meet again.

Today, teachers say we must let children learn and discover by themselves. But some children see a prison in the school and are there ❹ since their parents make them go. Many of them even think of leaving school and finding jobs. Which could be a great loss for the coming generations that no longer show interest in the education as a door to a bright future .
